Japanese Cut Chip Output

Goal Is to Avert U.S. Sanctions on Semiconductors

By Susan Chira New York Times Service TOKYO - Japanese trade officials announced on Monday mea-sures aimed at averting U.S. sanc-tions against Japanese makers of semiconductors. The officials also hinted that Japan would retaliate if sanctions were imposed. Pressure for sanc-tions has been mounting in Washington. Trade ministry officials announced, as they had indicated last week that they would, a cut in production of semiconductors, the memory chips that store and retrieve data in computers and other devices.

The officials also released the summaries of two letters sent hy senior trade ministry officials to their U.S. counterparts, explaining the steps Japan is taking to uphold a semiconductor agreement between the two countries.

Masaji Yamamoto, deputy di-rector-general of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry's machinery and information industries bureau, said that the ministry had asked makers of the computer chips to cut back production of several chips by 11 percent between April and June.

Ministry officials hope this move will belp force prices up in Japan and reduce supplies of chips available for "gray markets," where chips are being sold below cost, a practice known as dumping. In the letters sent to Washington, Haime Tamura, minister of inter-AND REAL SATEAVEL national trade and industry, and Makoto Kuroda, vice minister for. international affairs, 'argued that such measures demonstrated that Japan was doing its utmost to np-hold last July's semiconductor agreement.

something that one country can do payments, subsidies and restrictions on imports that nations grant their farmers.

Elected governments have been unwilling to trade away programs so dear to their politically powerful farm constituencies, But in farming, as in many other economic areas, attitudes have been changing. For one thing, spending on agriculture has grown so huge that it is crowding aside the demands of other powerful interests.

In the United States, aid to larm-ets is expected to total $27 hillion in a year in which the federal budget deficit is projected to be $180 hillion. With Congress and the administration now committed to cutting the deficit, mostly through reductions in spending, agricultur-al costs emerge as a highly visible largel.

The problem is similar elsewhere, The 12-nation European Community speat $23 billion on farm-support programs lest year; the husiness of farming becomes caught up in the spreading weh of economic interdependence among nations. One country's farm-support policies affect world prices and the economies of other countries as surely as do changes in the values of currencies. President Renald Reagan put the subject on the international ne-

While Sccretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Shultz voiced objections to the Iran scheme, Mr. Busb often remained silent, according to statements by others who were there.

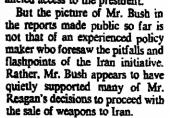

Former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie, a member of the Tower commission board that investigated the affair, said:

"As lar as the vice president is concerned, in the story that we developed, largely with the help of people's recollections, the vice president is noteworthy more lor his absence than his involvement in this whole unfolding tragedy."

Mr. Bush hopes to base his campaign for the presidency on the legacy of the Reagan years and his own long experience in high government positions, including that of director of central intelligence. His political advisers have private-Iv described Mr. Bush's experience as a "stature advantage" over his rivals.

Throughout the Reagan years. Mr. Bush has sought to have a more detailed grasp of complex foreign policy and national security issues than the president.

Every day, the vice president is given a special intelligence briefing from the CIA, which is more extensive than Mr. Reagan's. Mr. Bush has also been given several special foreign policy troubleshooting assignments, ranging Irom an important mission to Western Europe on arms control in 1983 to heading a task force on terrorism in 1985 and 1986. Mr. Bush has also had unparalleled access to the president.

The English-language paper said no one was killed in the incident, which took place in Zhangzi County in January, but that thousands of people complained of headaches, stomach pains and diarrhea. It said those responsible would be charged and brought to trial. The factory was fined 30,000 yuan ($8,100) and its deputy director was removed, the paper said.

Many fish were killed by the 18 tons of highly poisonous ammunium hydrogen carbonate liquid that poured into the Nanzhang River when maintenance was being performed on equipment at the plant, it added.

There is no record that Mr. Bash had other "reservations" about the Iran arms sales at the time they were going on. After the initiative became public, he expressed concern about the way it was handled outside of normal White House procedures, and he has said it was wrong to trade arms for hostages Like Mr. Reagan, Mr. Bush was reluctant to acknowledge that the administration had made such a trade

The full story of the Iran-contra affair is not yet known, and the congressional investigations as well as the special prosecutor's investi gation may add new details about the vice president's role in the Iran initiative. Mr. Bush has created much of the mystery about his role, as he has about his other activities during the Reagan years. The vice presi dent has long made it a practice not to disclose the advice he gives the president, and he has refused to say what he told Mr. Reagan in their private conversations.

"What I do have is the ability to walk into the Oval Office without asking anybody about it and give him my view," Mr. Bush said at a oews conference last week in Florida. "He knows that I'm not going to go ont and say. Well, I dist with the president on this, or I told him he ought to do this, but he wouldn't do it.'

"So when he agrees, he know I'm going to be supportive, and when he disagrees, he knows I'm going to be supportive. I don't think the vice president ought to be adding to the burden of the presidency by publicly posturing."

Mr. Reagan, however, opened the door slightly on Mr. Bush's ad-vice last week in his nationally televised news conference. At the end of the session, a reporter asked if Mr. Bush had ob-jected to the Iran initiative. Mr. Reagan paused and said firmly, "No." On Friday he revised his account, telling a spokesman that Mr. Bush had expressed reservations, while supporting the policy.

Europe of the Snails

Tomorrow, March 25, the fifth day of spring and feast of the Annunciation, is the 30th anniversary of the Treaty of Rome, which announced that the European Economic Community had been born. In three decades the Community has seen both its membership and its living standards double, enriching itself faster than America, although more slowly than Japan. In absolute terms the average European is still less well-off than the American, and most are less well-off than the Japanese. Perhaps what is most striking, politically, is the way the Community has progressively opened its doors to poorer countries. A limited collection of rich countries clustered round the Rhine, with ftaly tagging along, has become more representative of Europe - although with insufficient Nordic presence.

There was no lack of well-wishers around the cradle. Enthusiasm in Europe - Britain abstaining - for an institution to replace warfare by welfare was matched by American support for an initiative to make Europe more than a simple geographical expression, a mere space between the Soviets and the United States. And since the infant extended its hands to poorer countries overseas, political criticism from the nonaligned was muted. The extent of criticism of Community policies today, emanating from America, the Third World and the antipodes alike, makes clear how far Europe has become a force to be reckoned with.

How far it is putting its strength to the best purpose is less clear. A leading ftalian industrialist scorns Europe because the only common market it has created is, at vast cost, in agriculture. Certainly the Common Agricultural Policy has pro-duced excesses, and a degree of inefficiency, which would have appalled the founding fathers and which envenom relationships inside and outside Europe. Curbing the profligacy is slow because governments cling to the belief that the farm vote is decisive, even though fewer than 5 percent of adults work on the land.

But the problems do not stop at the farm gate. Free trade in industry and services, the sectors in which Europe should specialize, is shackled by a welter of restrictions even after tariffs and quotas have disappeared. In a world in which Europe will increasingly depend on its ability to sell up-market high-technology products, the trap is obvious. While the United States has a domestic market of 240 million people and Japan 120 million, oo single European country has more than 60 million. How can Europe keep up, in costly research and innovation, exploiting economies of scale, so long as its producers have such small markets at home? In theory, the next five years will see a genuine European market of more than 300 million people. But there are many limpets to prize from the rocks.

Most signally, Europe has failed yet to pass on from a somewhat pedestrian customs union toward more meaningful economic and monetary unity - to conditions where broad economic policies are designed more or less in unison rather than having to be brought painfully back into harmony when disaster strikes.

The present European Monetary System is a first, limited move. Perhaps by its 35th birthday Europe will have moved further. But the pace is dictated by the slowest snail. Individual governments are strangely retentive of economic sovereighty that they can no longer exercise. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

Israel and South Africa

Even when Israel's coalition leaders do night, it seems to come out wrong. It has been an open secret for years that Israel has been a covert arms supplier to South Africa. All that has been hidden is the size of the trade; estimates vary from $40 million to $800 million a year. Now Israel is finally moving to halt what it has never acknowledged but it will not say when, and its leaders imply that their welcome decision is somehow a favor to the United States, Perversely, the effect is to deny Israel the credit it deserves. Certainly in the short term, Israel stands to lose jobs and contracts. But it is doing oo favor to Washington by joining with all Western nations in halting arms sales to a racist police state. That stand is manifestly in Israel's interest. To be seen as Pretoria's secret partner mocks Israel's moral claims. affronts black Africa, provides a propaganda windfall for the PLO and embarrasses all of Israel's allies. Why else would this trade be so furtive? Besides, why should Israel deepen its dependence on the arms bazaar, the riskiest commerce in the world?

It is also true that selling arms to the South Africans could, under American sanctions legislation, jeopardize Israel's $1.8 billion in annual American military aid. And yes, there is general nervousness in Jerusalem about the Pollard spy scandal. According to fsraeli officials, those were factors that led them reluctantly to end a questionable traffic. Israel has made a wise decision. Now let it be a clear one,

Base Pains in Spain

Haggling about military bases has all the mancuver. The bases were established under joys of arm-wrestling on a sinking raft. Global strategic interests get hopelessly for the theo isolated dictator, General Franmixed with angry regional disputes when dealing with NATO allies like Greece and identified with the defense of democracy; in Spain they were viewed as a prop of tyranny. But if Spain looks only to its domestic politics and not to the needs of common defense, there can be no solution. The bases there are of considerable importance. The open plains, the good weather and, most important, their location far beyond the front lines in West Germany make them so. Surely there is space for a pragmatic ac-commodation. Both sides are willing to re-duce the number of U.S. servicemen. Both agree on continued U.S. tenancy of the naval depot at Rota, vital to the 6th Fleet. The problem is Torrejón and the F-16s. Perhaps the answer is a long-term arrangement for moving the planes elsewhere in Spain or replacing them with an adequate substitute. These issues arise almost yearly in Spain, or in Portugal, Greece, Turkey or the Philippines. Billions of dollars in American aid are provided as payment for joint defense and maintaining America's strategic position in the world. These stakes and concerns are generally well understood in Washington, But the bases have to be justified over and again to the host countries, and compromises made. It is the inescapable price of leading a coalition rather than an empire.

Building a Wall Doesn't Solve the Problem

BOSTON — In the third century B.C., Emperor Shih Huang Ti began building a wall along China's northwest border to seal off the Middie Kingdom from marauding nomads. Five hundred years later Hadrian tried the same approach in England. A thousand years later, the same solution was invoked by the lords of medieval Europe to keep out bandits and armies. In this century, France built the Maginot Line along its border with Germany. Wall building is not a new idea. The instinct to define and defend a safe bit of territory, making it secure against evil forces, runs deep. Walls and locked gates give palpable evi-dence of security. If we stay within the bounded area, we feel invulnerable.

Most people who now inhabit the planet have been forced to give up the quest for invulnerability as unrealistic. They are too often reminded of their dependence upon, and vulnerability to, others beyond their borders. But in the United States, a land his-torically and geographically cut off from the rest, in which people tell each other stories of self-reliance and warn of evils "out there," the dream of invulnerability endures. That dream has led America to concentrate its efforts on warding off outside perils, often at the expense of tending to perils within. Consider four examples:

 The primary American response to cocaine and other noxious drugs has been to fortify the perimeters. Narcotics agents are using paramili-tary techniques to eradicate drug crops, interrupt supply routes and seize contraband at the border. There has been less diligence, however, about cradicating the drug habit. Capitalism is a sturdy institution; en-terprising drug traffickers are only slightly deterred by border patrols

By Robert B. Reich when so hierative a market beckons. tion is U.S. responsibility for the tor-

Americans cannot get control over the drug problem mless they get conrent. Americans are eager to hire illogals because they cannot find fellow citizens to pick perishable crops, sew garments, assemble toys and care for trol over themselves. • The primary response to the in-flux of steel, autos, television sets and their children as cheaply or at all. Do they want foreigners to work for them, to do jobs they are unwilling to pay each other enough to do? This entails a decision about discipline.

computer chips has been to raise the walls ever higher, with quotas and other nontariff barriers. Americans routinely blame "them" for shipping inexpensive, high quality stuff, and not buying enough of America's more expensive, lower quality stuff. In 1980, 20 percent of the goods produced in America were protected against foreign imports; today more than 35 percent are, and Congress is crafting even higher barriers.

There remains the disconcerting fact that Americans want to buy goods cheaply, and often cannot make them as cheaply or as well as foreigners can. If there were not such an overwhelming desire for Japanese cars and computer chips, South Ko-rean steel and Taiwanese television sets, the problem would not exist. So the responsibility is at least half America's. If others can do something better and more cheaply, Amer-icans ought to learn to do it as well, or to do something else that others can-not so easily rival. If others are willing to sacrifice profits now for the sake of larger profits in the future, Americans should make similar sacrifices if they hope to stay in the game. · The response to the flood of Latin American immigrants has been to "regain control of our borders." Patrols have become more aggressive in capturing foreigners trying to enter illegally from Mexico; immigration officials have become more ruthless in ferreting out aliens who sneak through and overstay their visas. What has been left out of the calcula-

The solutions have less to do with containing "them" than with taking joint responsibility.

The choice is muddled by casting the issue as one of controlling "them.

• In seeking to ensure national se-curity, there has been an even greater temptation to build the walls higher rather than to take joint responsibility with "them" for managing a rela-tionship capable of yielding devastating losses on all sides.

Before the Reagan administration launched its Strategie Defense Initiative, oo real defense against interconti-nental ballistic missiles was thought to be possible. The "star wars" proposal has resourceted the metaphor of a fortress, an impenetrable shield in space that will put America's fate back into its own hands. The visceral appeal of star wars has had nothing whatsoever to do with the cold logic of national defense. That is would very likely never work, that it would almost certainly be a hideously expensive approach to security are quite irrelevant cavils. Perhaps star wars may yet pay off as a bargaining chip toward obtain-ing an enduring arms control agreement, as some of its supporters be-lieve. But there is the danger that it will simply accelerate the arms race, inducing Moscow to hedge its bets by investing in a much larger arsenal. It may also coavince Europeans that they had better fend for themselves, rather than rely on American willingness to come to their defense. The most insidious consequence of all is. that the comforting affore of a space shield may reduce Americans' interest in arms control altogether.

All of these efforts at containing evils beyond the borders are falsely premised. They assume that the problems exist "out there" and can be kept that way if one exects high enough barriers. But in truth, U.S. borders are permeable to anything for which Americans are willing to pay, as well as to indisputably unwel-come cargoes like nuclear warheads. The solutions to many intractable The solutions to many infractable problems — dangerous drugs, com-petitiveness, illegal immigrants, the arms race — have less to do with containing "them" than with taking joint responsibility with other peo-ples for achieving mutual gains and avoiding mutual losses. What poses the largest threat is chronic failure to acknowledge the subtle interdepen-cies that bind the species together. A clear-cyed view of interests and options as they are conditioned by ties to the rest of the world - which is not the same as the romance that one's interests are simply the same as those of others - would make efforts to advance U.S. goals more fruitful.

About Bases, Facilities and Local Enmeshments

O SLO -- Since the 1960s the struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union has taken on the character of a global contest. A significant part of this competition has involved acquisition or improvement of bases and facilities in foreign countries. The terms "bases" and "facilities" can cause confusion, Clark and Subic Bay are American air force and naval bases in the Philippines; Diego Garcia is an American base on an island in the Indian Ocean; Rota is an American naval base in Spain. The Soviets have a naval base at Cam Ranh Bay in Vietnam. But there are many places where U.S. and Soviet forces perform specific functions that do oot carn the term "base." Examples would be a U.S. electronic installation in Turkey or Japan. The military refer to these locations as "facilities," particularly if the host country is sensitive about the term "base." There are also places where the big powers can obtain services, even if they do not have permanent installations there. An example for the American navy is Cockburn Sound in western Australia. The Soviets have access to facilities in Libya and Syria but no permanent bases there.

The United States has a far more extensive network of bases than the Soviet Union. The Pentagon says it has 334 bases and facilities in foreign countries, as compared with about 700 two decades ago. It is, however, using a narrow interpretation of these terms. Air Force Magavides an excellent base for intelligence, naval and air operations in the Caribbean.

These comments apply with particular force to peacetime. How these Soviet arrangements would operate in wartime is another question. At the very least, the United States and its allies would have to divert resources to assure that the host countries remained neutral.

The United States and the Soviet Union follow somewhat different strategies when looking for bases abroad. The Pentagon is preoccupied with preparations for conflicts, both local and global. The Kremlin is not unmindful of the role that foreign bases could play during a war, but it also makes use of them in peacetime to make trouble. In looking for bases and facilities, both major powers must keep in mind ranges for their aircraft and sailing time for their ships. The United States can refuel its aircraft in the air, but this is a complicated and costly opera-tion. The air force prefers a network of bases which it can use for refueling and repairs. In the Pacific it relies primarily on Hawaii, Japan and the Philippines. For the Indian Ocean it uses airfields near Darwin in northern Australia, on Diego Garcia and in Oman. For the Atlantic there are airfields in Iceland, the Azores and and facilities, the United States and the Soviet Union have to take the desires of the host coun-try into account. The United States finds it easiest if the host country feels threatened and wishes to keep its defense budget down. West Germany, South Korea and Japan are the best known examples. Other countries, such as Oman and Turkey, also fall into this category. Being poor and surrounded by potential enemies helps explain the willingness of Ethiopia and South Yemen to cooperate with Moscow.

Both the Soviet Union and the United States operate gigantic military assistance programs, partly to obtain base rights. The Pentagon esti-mated last year that Soviet sales of military equipment to the Third World in this decade were almost $55 billion. During this period, Soviet military assistance to Caribbean and African comprises has run consistently higher than Unit-ed States deliveries, usually dramatically higher. The United States has given priority to NATO Europe, Israel and Egypt. When these countries have taken their share, only a little more than a quarter of the pie is left for the rest of the world. Since Congress reduced the 1987 foreign aid budget, the Reagan administration finds it impossible to keep all its promises regarding com-pensation for foreign bases. It is therefore asking Congress for a supplemental appropriation. Since there is hitle prospect that the struggle

Openness Is in Order Here, Too

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld WASHINGTON - There is a W new strategic debate waiting to begin, or so I have come to suspect after trying to sort out a batch of new thinking by experts inside and out-side the Reagan administration on the matter of command and control of the superpowers' nuclear forces. The old debate still dominates the political arena. It is premised on the notion that the size and shape of the Soviet and American arbenals are what count, and it takes us to the familiar passionate arguments over building this and restraining that

But there is a growing consensus that you could double or haive U.S. forces, as John Steinhuner of the Brookings Institution pats if, and only marginally affect security --even if you throw in a realistic version of the Strategic Defense humanye. It follows that security is more than the military belance, more than min-bers: What counts is the way forces would be used in a crisis. This is not a would be used in a crisis. This is not a new concern, but it is becoming a more central one. There is a widening respect for the difficulties of keeping control in a crisis, for the ways is which things could go wrong. The analysts, like environe else, are having their own crisis of confi-dence in dencerners.

dence in deterrence. President Resgan and the "peace movement" both decided that deterrance was insafe and immonal and needed to be re-placed — by the SDI and disarmament, respectively. Others have decided that the calca-lations of retionality and pentral con-trol induitying the idea of determine take your only to the point where a crisis starts to go critical. At that point, other considerations take over. stress and chance, on the one hand and, on the other, authority exercised by men and machines beyond the president's reach. This is the theme, by the way; of David Aaron's new nuclear thriller, "State Scarlet," which builds realistically to a crisis that the author resolves - but how else? - with a fairy tale. Right here in the need for realism is where a new strategic debate, on command and control, might begin. The Reagan administration's scriousness in devoting funds and highlevel thought to improving "Strategic C" (command, control, communica-tions) has been widely noted. The thrust of it has been to improve survivability in crisis and war situations so that the United States, even under heavy attack, could keep control of American forces and deny Moscow control of Soviet forces.

Others saggest, however, an alterone side to absorb a massive attack, and not just for a few minutes-or hours but pechaps for much longer, and still then be able to retaliate massively. Sophistication means a an that wo d let one side say, a light attack from a heavy one - something that evidently is very difficult now - so that if it chose it could retaliate proportionately or even end its own attack. The administration believes - as nuclear conservatives do - that deterrence is oow precarious, that U.S. forces are dangerously vulnerable to Soviet attack and that it is essential to maintain a robust war-fighting capa-bility even as a Soviet attack rolls on. Others think that deterrence is holding but that the dynamics of matual engagement could cost both sides control in a crisis. To these critics, loss of control means not so much an inability to retaliate as an inability to conduct a controlled retaliation, up or down. In this spirit, Ashton Carter, a former Pentagon aide now at Harvard, calls the administration's approach "polishing a hair trigger for a system that doesn't have any eyes." He would polish the safety and improve the eyes. Do the eyes have it? Hardly, and perhaps in part for a particular reason; Everybody — officials and critical president and Congress, civilians and military - gets into the argument over doctrine, over deterrence. But officials, and especially the military, hold actual nuclear operations very close. Congress decides what weapons to buy but has little say about how they will be used. Apparently no one on Capisol Hill and few civilians in the Pentagon, for instance, have SIOP-ESI (Single Integrated Operation Plan - Extremely Sensitive Information) clearance for the American war plan. These matters are no more esoteric than the fine print of MX and SDI that politicians and other amateurs now routinely grapple with. The dif-ference is that they may be more important. I am in a learning mode on this one, f think we all need to be. The Washington Post.

Turkey. Figuring fair compensation for Azores bases stirs argument in Portugal. And things can go sour when democracies inherit base agreements signed by departed dictators, as in the Philippines. Or in Spain, where the United States is again learning that having bases requires hard compromises.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger flew to Madrid last week to plead the case for an air base that the Pentagon elaims is "irreplaceable and vital." But Prime Minister Felipe González will not yield a millimeter on his demand for the withdrawal of 5,000 U.S. servicemen and 72 F-16 fighters from Torrejón, ocar Madrid. And the current accord with Spain expires in May 1988.

Consider first Mr. González's case. Just last year he risked his political skin by reversing his Socialist Party's oppositioo to NATO. Challenging tradition and polls, he urged referendum approval of continued NATO membership. Spaniards gave him a 52.5 percent margin, but on his promise to begin trimming a U.S. presence consisting of 12.000 personnel at one naval and three air bascs. And Spain, he pledged, would stay free of nuclear weapons. Now he has to deliver, and does not have much room for

Listen to Saudi Complaints

There is Britisb uncase at the kingdom's apparent rapprochement with Iran, sig-naled by the dismissal of Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani as oil minister, and worries that for all the reforms in prospect, Saudi Arabia may be moving too slowly to head off internal unrest that could destabilize the whole region. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that Saudi Arabia has been, and remains, a force for moderation, a state whose influence has been consistently deployed in the interests of regional balance. If there are to be complaints, then those from Saudi Arabia have more force: that the West has done little to address the Palestine issue, the central problem of the Middle East; that cynical Western sales of arms to both Iran and Iraq have made it more difficult for mediators to make any progress toward ending that conflict; and that Sandi efforts to build up the ability of Golf states to provide their own defenses have been neither understood nor appreciated.

Talking About Suicide

Studies have found that the publicity surrounding some suicides tends to generate imitation suicides. But the evidence also seems clear that the publicity helps spur action at both family and community levels. Suicide is the second leading killer of teenagers in the United States. Maybe adults and children simply must talk more openly. Maybe adults need to show that they, too, some times feel hopeless and powerless.

The Time Has Now Come to Reject the System Itself

ARE Mikhail Gorbachev's new policies the historical turning point we have been praying for, signaling the end of oppression and mis-ery in the Soviet Union? Or are we witnessing only a short-lived "thaw," a tactical retreat before the next offensive, as Lenin put it in 1921? True, a number of the most prominent buman rights activists have now been released from prisoo labor camps and from exile. As welcome as this gesture is, however, we cannot fail to notice that such selective mercy is of the kind calculated to make a maximum public impression with a minimum of genuine concessions. If the Soviet Union is really undergoing a change of heart, why has it not declared a general amnesty for all prisoners of conscience instead of resolving certain highly visible cases one by one over the course of a year? We have not heard any clear condemnation of the criminal use of psychiatry, the most octorious of the Soviet methods of repression. Nor have we seen any progress with re-spect to emigration. Moscow has recognized the need for radical economic reform, and this is welcome, but to date no serious sign of economic reform is in evidence.

The Soviet Union's announced desire to end the war in Afghanistan could be even more welcome. But if the Kremlin really means to end the war, why does it not simply withdraw its troops? If the purpose of the delay is to leave behind a stable government, why not allow free and fair elections under strict international supervision? to satisfy the Kremlin, we are forced to conclude that all it really wants is the Perhaps the greatest puzzlement of all is that created by the new policy of ing in Pravda the very criticisms of Soviet reality that only a few years ago would have been branded as accordingly. 1912: Distress in Britain LONDON - While the last hope of a peaceful settlement of the great coal strike apparently hangs on the conference between the men and the owners [on March 25], distress is daily tightening its grip on the poorest classes throughout the country. Two million people are now suffering ex-ceedingly under the strain of no wages and dear fuel. Meanwhile, the strike has lasted 23 days. The Government, while conceding the principle of a minimum wage, is fully deter-mined oot to set the precedent of fixing any wage figures in its bill. Huge sums of money are being spent by the miners' and other unions on maintaining the strikers and memployed. From all parts of Great Brit-ain come increasing tales of misery and want. Family men suffer the double pain of want and of seeing their

and other interested members of the public for nearly 40 years,

And the countries that could demand that they be opened keep refusing -including the United States. It is a story that shows a deep reluctance in both Western and Communist countries to take a real look at the whole war crime era. "Pandora's box." UN diplomats call the archives; a revealing cliche.

The story begins in 1948 when the War Crimes Commission, going out of business, handed over about 38,000 files to the three-year-old United Nations. The commission, 17 nations, did not expect them to be put away and locked up. About 25,000 names were on a spe-cial "A" list of people about whom the commission felt there was sufficient evidence to warrant prosecution.

The commission itself had decided in 1946 to remove the lists from the "so-cret" category. Quite logical: How could war criminals be prosecuted when the names and charges were secret? The commission also said the archives were a valuable record for historians. Historians do not write secret books.

But about a year after they were entrusted to the United Nations, its offi- tober (883, Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. cials decided that it would be best to lock them away and open them only to governments who discovered the names, and on a confidential basis.

No nation was interested until 1986 when the World Jewish Congress disclosed that the commission had concluded in 1948 that there was sufficient evidence to prosecute Kurt Waldheim in connection with the murder of Yugoslav partisans in World War II. Mr. Wald-heim, reluctantly stepping out after 10 years as UN secretary-general, was run-ning for president of Austria when the and background and a relentless chaldisclosure came. He won.

Then about nine months ago the pesky Israelis demanded and got confiden-tial access to 300 files. They also asked Secretary-General Javier Pérez de Cuéllar to open the files so that historians, scholars and journalists could examine them. Veteran UN specialists agree with Israel that it is plainly within the power of the secretary-general to open archives that the UN staff itself had closed.

Benjamin Netanyahu, again asked the secretary-general to open the archives. No, said the secretary-general, the former commission members objected. The Israeli position, which makes sense, is that the secrecy issue was created by the UN staff and runs counter to the original intent of the commission. They point out that a master list of nes and summaries of charges found its way to a public American archive in Maryland. Any "protection of the innocent" argument is moot. March 10 and 11) by Jacob Neusner: Jacob Neusner and I were classmate at Harvard College. He is an extremely prolific professor of Jewish Studies at Brown University, in Rhode Island, the state to which Roger Williams fled from the oppression of Puritan tyranny. I, a physician, chose to leave the land of my birth, thus following the instruction that our fellow Harvard alumnus had made in Keene, New Hampshire, in Ocsaid then: "He who has not lived the action and the passion of his times cannot be said to have lived at all".

In his two articles, Rabbi Neusner wraps his imperial being in transparent cloth. It is sad to read his gushing praise of Jews in exile, and see his complete lack of understanding of the passion of his people. There exists in Israel a Jewish people who are coming logether as a reborn entity. Slowly but definitely we are finding our way to a new Jewish way lenge by our neighbors to our right to exist as a national entity make life in Israel a fascination to all of Western society. The excitement, however, lies behind this. It is the new Jew, the Israeli, who is the real thing today.

Rabbi Neusner is wrong when he writes that "Orthodox rabbis just now have told women to stay away from burials of the dead because they are 'impure.' So much for the state of Orthodoxy in the state of Israel." Actually, it was a unique situation. Cheers for James Reston's opinion column "What Did the American People Know, and When?" (March 10). He found the head of the nail and slammed it again and again.

The trouble is that the Laxalts. Meeses, war contractors, Israeli lobby and other feeders at Uncle Sucker's trough of power and money know what Mr. Resion knows. Kuala Lumpur. A U.S. Double Standard

Regarding the editorial "South Korean Suspense" (March 11):

The double standard strikes again. U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz arrives in Seoul to preach to the South Koreans about democracy and the American Way. That would not be so bad if it were not for the fact that Mr. Shultz was fresh out of Communist China, where he praised Communist leaders for their recovery from their recent political crisis --- which resulted in a crackdown on free speech, no less.

Listening in on Mr. Shultz's press conferences in Beijing and Seoul, a visifor from outer space might get the idea that South Korea is a huntan rights desert while China is paradise on Earth. His conclusion, upon a closer look, would be that Earth would be that place to which to sell common sense. MATTHEW TYLER.

Some Guys Actually Loafed On the Porch in Old Clothes

N EW YORK -- The question before purchased for men by women, and cer-tainly not to make the men more attracwomen? The answer, of course, is: Yes, tive to other women. "No. really, darling, you look just ... fine."

This move to a conservative fashion mode --- in politics, style of dress, etc. --would seem to be a reaction to recent traumatic events in American history. I speak not of Vietnam or Watergate, of course, but of the leisure suit.

We were told, if only by our mothers, that we looked "nice" in our leisure suits, a fashion trend that came into being so we would have something to wear during a new chronological period called "leisure time," Before leisure time, bumans were just sort of "off work." It was crazy,

People didn't know what to do - no one had told them - and instead of participating in "sanctioned leisure time activities," such as hang gliding and wind surfing, they completely wasted their "time off" by playing cards, hors-ing around with the kids, washing the car or even just sitting on the porch - and without the benefit of leisure wear. Some people just wore their old clothes, It wasn't pretty,

We took it on good faith that we looked sharp in our leisure suits: top-stitched, double-knit polyester, perhaps in a robin's egg blue or banana, although orange was a favorite among state legislators. We thought women would swoon at our heavy gold chains and splashy shirts. open to the mesosternum, with planewing-size collars. We assumed that what would drive women wild would be wearing a leisure suit with a white-belt-andwhite-shoes set, a look that came to be known as the Full Cleveland.

We were shocked and dismayed to learn that in the final analysis our leisure suits had actually been repugnant to women all along - although a few occasionally seemed to dig them, shooting furtive glances at us in line at the Ponderosa Steak House.

Then one day it was -- slam, bam! -all over. No more leisure suits.

We were at a loss for how to attract women until Don Johnson and his sidekick, Michael Thomas Philip, or some combination thereof, came on the scene, They wore a day's growth, dyed T-shirts with sport coats, and no socks with their shoes. The women were all over them,

Men in the industrial Northeast had trouble with that look. For one thing, it's cold up here. For another, life is more formal in New York than it is in Miami. and the no-socks thing just didn't look right with wing-tips.

I recently wore my Full Cleveland leisure suit outfit to a costume party, and thought I was pretty clever. Two things happened. No one laughed, which was a switch from when 1 wore it seriously in the 1970s. And women didn't talk to me. which was no switch at all. .

The fashion magazines help, but when we see a nice casual "stay at home" outfil, too often the caption reads: sport coat, $980; sweater, $665; trousers, $300; shirt, $125; Italian loafers, a warreparation figure. # Israeli Jews on Trial for Talks with PLO

By Thomas L. Friedman

New York Tunes Service time in Israel's bistory, four Jews are being tried by their government ganization. The four were part of a delegation of Israelis that flew to Costinesti, Rumania, on Nov. 6, met for two hours with 15 middle-ranking representatives of the PLO, and then attended a banquet with them. The four said afterward they wanted to "make a dialogue for peace." The Israelis are being prosecuted under an amendment to the Prevention of Terrorism Ordinance, which outlaws "supporting" terrorist organizations. The government maintains a list of groups it coasiders terrorist organizations, and the PLO is at the top of the list.

As the delegation arrived at Ben Gurion Airport in November, the Bur were handed orders to report to police for questioning while demonstrators demanded their arrest. If convicted, they face up to three years in prison.

"This is a trial about smiling and having dinner," said one of the ac-cused, Latif Dori. "The govern-ment wants to make it impossible for me to talk to my enemy. Who am I supposed to talk to? To the Kurds? To the Uzbekis? To the New Zealanders? I did not choose my enemy. But we must talk to them, and they must talk to us, and nothing can stop that."

A lawyer for two of the accused, Avigdor Feldman, said he planned

The regime has energized much last eight years by rhetorically lashing the twin Satans, the United States and Israel. Particularly damaged by the dis-

Having unequaled influence over the day-to-day governing of Iran and its strategy in the war against Iraq, Mr. Rafsanjani must now contend with the political fallout from disclosures of clandestine contacts he supervised with Israeli officials and agents.

"OKYO - Japanese society is moving from the age of the ant to that of a new beastie, the anthopper. The change is bringing about a revolution in consumer babits and spending patterns. People still save: Government statistics show that savings averaged $46,000 per household in 1985, 2.62 times as much as 10 years before. But they also borrow, to the tune of $17,000 per household, or 3.47 times the amount of 10 years earlier.

They still buy things, but more and more they look for purchases that will express their individuality, rather than following the crowd, in work and play, they still tend to operate in groups but, as with their buying, they are beginning to assert individual tastes and desires.

are beginning to assert individual tastes and desires. The anthopper, as you may guess, is a creature that combines the characteristics of Aesop's ant and his grasshopper. Westerners coming to Japan for the first time may feel that the ant mentality dominates. But to those fiving within Japanese society, the evolotion is noticeable and somewhat alarming. After all, the anth-opper is a bybrid, a transitional figure. Is he preparing the way for the triumph of the grasshopper? No one can be certain. Dentsu, Japan's giant advertis-ing and marketing company, popularized the term anth-opper. Kimiharu Matsuda, a manager in Dentsu's mar-keting division, defines the creature as a middle manager

The Yen Shock

Beyond Exports Lies Need to Restructure

هكناهن لتصل

By John Burgess

QOKYO — After maintaining suspense for months, Nippon Steel Corp. went public in February with details of its plan to slim down drastically and thereby gain hope of survival under the stern rule of the new, strong yen. Over the next three years, the giant company said, it foresees cutting 19,000 employees from its rolls and going from the current 12 operating blast furnaces to eight.

The scale elsewhere might not be so dramatic, but export-oriented companies all over Japan are facing similar unpleasant decisions these days. The country is locked in a recession brought on by the strong yen, forcing a painful shakeout in many of the industries that created the postwar prosperity,

"It's shaping up as a very tumultuous year for the Japanese economy," said Johsen Takahashi, senior staff economist for Mitsubishi Research Institute. It could turn out, in fact, to be the worst since 1974 and the first oil shock.

The Japanese, who by nature look to the long term, hope, however, that is will be a blessing in disguise, a push toward a restructuring that should have started years ago.

It is time for the $2.2 trillion economy of Japan. bred on exports, to become "mature," politicians and bureaucrats here say constantly. It should move away from reliance on sales to foreigners for expansionary steam and toward the buying power of the 120 million Japanese.

Tuesday March 24, 1987

Still, the hard times brought on by endakka, a bybrid word that means "high yen" and has entered the popular vocabulary with connotations of a grave sinister force, show just how far the country has to go in acquiring an economy based oo domestic demand.

The recession dates to the September 1985 meeting at New York City's Plaza Hotel by finance officials from the so-called Group of Five, the United States, Japan, Britain, France and West Germany. They decided on a program of market interventioo to drive down the value of the dollar. It was then worth about 240 yen, a relatively high value that was beloing bolster Japan's mammoth trade surpluses by making its goods cheap to foreigners.

Planners' Rosy Predictions Take on Recessionary Hue

By Gregory Clark

OKYO — Japan's economy is in much more trouble than its planners have been willing to admit. Only six months ago they had convinced themselves that the shock of sudden yen appreciation to Japan's main export industries would be brief and would soon be canceled out by the benefits of cheaper imports and rising consumer spending.

They had estimated real gross national product growth in the coming financial year, which begins in April, at 3.6 percent, well up from the 2.5 percent level in the year just ending. Today, this optimistic scenario is beginning to fall apart. Pretax profits of major companies have fallen by about 20 percent in the past 12 months and leading export firms have seen falls in the 40 percent region.

The big five steelmakers say they will lay off more than 40,000 workers. Shipbuilders are in even worse shape. Unemployment has reached the high level (for Japan) of 3 percent. Investment in manufacturing plant and equipment fell by an estimated 7 percent to 10 percent in the past year while industrial production fell 0.3 percent.

Meanwhile, Japan's export rivals, mainly South Korea and Taiwan, continue to pot export pressure on Japan. In steel production, Korea is much more efficient than Japan's older steel plants and is pressing hard on the productivity levels of even the best Japanese mills. It also exports more ships than Japan does. Increasingly, Japanese companies are having to get labor-intensive parts and materials from abroad or else manufacture abroad themselves.

The Japanese oow talk in the same alarmist terms about the "hollowing-out" of their manufacturing sector that they used to reserve for the U.S. and West European economies.

Japan's steelworkers face the prospect of large-scale layoffs or transfers to other plants.

Worse are the signs that the fall in exports and manufacturing generally is starting to spill over into the rest of the economy. To date, commanufacturing investment has held up well: It rose by a healthy 12 percent in the current financial year. But estimates for the coming year show a downturn. Electric power consumption, another good indicator overall, is also turning down. Private consumption spending is inching up at a low rate of 1 percent to 2 percent per annum. Clearly, things are much worse than the planners had anticipated. Nor is the cause of all this, the bulging trade surplus, likely to go away easily. Exports continue to outpace imports at a nearly 2-to-1 margin in dollar terms. Part of the reasoo is the J-curve effect of yen appreciation on export dollar earnings. There are signs, however, that exports in volume terms are also beginning to rise again. Exporters refuse to give up established markets abroad. They will cut costs to the bone, or even export at a loss, to keep those markets. The falloff in the domestic economy puts even more pressure on them to export.

TOECD Ban

Few now go along with official claims that the yen is overvalued at about 150 to the dollar. Many oow see further appreciation pressure, possibly to the 120 mark. Little credence is given to government forecasts that the trade surplus in the coming financial year will shrink to $81 billion from the estimated $94 billion in the current year.

Given all this, the government's reluctance to expand the domestic economy is inexplicable, True, it has cut its discount rate as far as it can, to a record low of 2.5 percent. But only now and under strong pressure from the United States is it considering the more important step of expanding spending on public works and housing.

Even so, it seems clear that any official action will be a classic case of ton little too late. To date, the government has insisted that its first priority is to reduce the large burden of official debt inherited from more profligate days. Twenty percent of the national budget goes to debt servicing. Conservative planners worried about the mounting burden of welfare payments had persuaded the government to ledge a ceiling on public works and other budget items for well into the future.

Given Japan's high rate of savings, though, and the fact that the debt burden has peaked (at well below current U.S. levels, incidentally), Japan would seem to have good leeway to spend more on badly needed infrastructure such as urban renewal, sewage and better

There are signs that a rethinking is under way. The government has promised to speed up the spending of money allocated for public works. If oot this year, then next year, it says, it will increase the size of these allocations. In the meantime, it hopes the private sector will come to the aid of the nation and invest more.

The problem is that the private sector has already found other things to do with its sur-plus money. A stock market binge is one of them. Even more alarming is the intense speculation in urban land, which has pushed prices to levels where new development spending could easily be choked off.

Some urge major public works projects, such as filling in Tokyo Bay or moving the capital to a new site, as a way to absorb surplus private funds and reinvigorate the economy. But no one seems eager to come up with detailed plans or financine

More likely, there will be continued hand, wringing while the grinding logic of the spe-change rate forces the economy even further into a recessionary corner.

How long would a recession last? Few underestimate the ability of the still dynamic Japanese economy to adjust to difficulties. And the government seems genuine in its pledges to restructure the economy, including even agriculture, to allow more imports.

But as some point out, even if Japan imported all its coal, textiles, aluminum, oran meat and even some of its rice, it would reduc the trade surplus by only a few billion dollars. Far more important is a domestic reliation to reduce the pressure to export.

Southeast Asia Is Cashing In on the Relocation of Japanese Industry

By Michael Richardson

INGAPORE - Noncommunist countries in Southeast Asia that offer attractive investment conditions have started to benefit from a major relocation of manufacturing industries in Japan to other parts of the world.

This upsurge in direct Japanese investment in selected members of ASEAN, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, was largely triggered by a rapid rise in the value of the yen against nearly all other East Asian currencies and the U.S. dollar. Since September 1985, for example, the yen has appreciated 53 percent against the Singapore dollar.

This currency revaluation has made exports of goods produced in Japan substantially more expensive, while imports have become much cheaper.

The revaluation, combined with strong pres-sure from the United States and the European Community oo Tokyo to reduce the boge Japa-nese trade surplus with America and Western Europe, is helping Southeast Asia.

A recent study by JETRO, Japan's External Trade Organization, noted that Japanese businesses, spurred by the yen appreciation, were reducing output at home and shifting production and procurement offshore.

The study said that in Asia, this intensifying trend began in early 1986 with South Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong and Singapore and spread to Malaysia and Thailand in the second half of the year

In an interview, Tan Chin Nam, general manager of Singapore's Economic Development Board, said the pattern of Japanese investment in Asia was changing.

"Before, Japanese companies used to import raw materials and export finished goods, mannfacturing outside Japan only those products that could be made cheaper than at home," he "Now, more and more big Japanese manufacturers are introducing a divisioo of labor.

They make finished products and components wherever it is cost-effective." Western officials said Japan's investment strategy was partly designed to alleviate friction with the United States and the EC by reducing its bilateral trade surpluses.

They said this was being done in two ways: by establishing manufacturing operations in the United States and Europe to avoid protectionist barriers; and by setting up or expanding plants in East Asia and other parts of the world to meet local demand and serve as export and Thailand - accounted for about 20 percent of the $$3.6 billion invested abroad by Japan in the 35 years to March 1986.

According to figures published by JETRO, just over 29 percent of the $83.6 billion went into manufacturing, with ferrous and nonferrous metals, chemicals, electrical and transport machinery claiming the biggest shares. In the nonmanufacturing sector, Japanese investments were concentrated in commerce, mining, banking and insurance, transportation and service industries.

However, Asia's share of total worldwide

Brunei's market as too small to be attractive, while the Philippines was perceived to be politically unstable.

Indonesia, Southeast Asia's largest oil and natural gas producer and the world's fifth most populous nation, has attracted just over 10 percent of Japan's global direct investments since 1951.

Statistics issued last month by JETRO headquarters in Tokyo showed that, of the 126 cases of direct Japanese investment in ASEAN in 1986, 63 were in Singapore, 28 in Malaysia, 17 in Thailand, 13 in Indonesia and five in the

The officials pointed out that exports to the United States and the EC from Japanese industrial ventures in Southeast Asia did not show up in official U.S.-Japanese and EC-Japanese trade statistics.

They said an added bonus for Japanese companies with operations in third countries such as South Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Singapore and its ASEAN partners was access to the U.S., European, Japanese and other developed-country markets through the gener-alized system of tariff preferences, which gives tariff and other advantages to approved prod-ucts from developing and newly industrializing nations.

Mr. Tan said it had become common for Japanese companies in Asia to ship compo-nents and finished products back to Japan as well as to third countries.

In Thailand in January, after visiting Indonesia and Malaysia, Hajime Tamura, minister of international trade and industry in Tokyo, announced a four-point program of Japanese assistance to accelerate industrial development among the members of ASEAN.

Without giving details, he said Japan would provide technical and financial assistance to the region's export-oriented industries, increase its investment in manufacturing, help expand small and medium-sized enterprises, and enlarge technical cooperation. The six ASEAN members - Brunei, Indo-

Japanese investment has been declining in recent years, dropping from 16 percent in thefinancial year that ended in March 1985, to-11.7 percent in March 1986.

In the year to last March, 45 percent of the S12.2 billion in Japanese investments went to North America, 21.4 percent to Latin America and 15.8 percent to Europe. Keiichi Oguro, assistant director of JE-TRO's division for Asia and Oceania in Tokyo, said many more Japanese companies were planning to set up new plants or expand existing production facilities in Southeast Asia.

However, Toshihiro Ide, managing director of JETRO's Singapore office, noted that because oil and other commodity prices had fallen, Japanese industrialists were no longer so interested in securing access to raw material supplies in Southeast Asia by investing in resource-rich countries such as Indonesia. In seeking offshore manufacturing bases, he said, they were looking for countries that of-fered political stability and a favorable environment for doing business. He said most Japanese investors regarded Philippines. No values were attached to these investments.

Thailand's Board of Investments said new Japanese projects seeking government tax ill-centives rose to 47 in 1986 from 27 the year before, and were expected to exceed 100 in :1987.

Japanese businessmen said Thailand's at tractions included a cheap labor force, a large consumer population and an expanding econo

U.S. Congress Set to 'Bash' Japan

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

TASHINGTON - Within the last two years three Asian leaders - Rajiv Gandhi of India, Lee Kuan Againso of the Philippines — have adthed that the increasingly prickly trade relations between the two countries sould cause some personal embarrassment to the Japanese leader, are politeby urging that the Japanese reconsider. A staunch internationalist, Mr. Na-Fasone, during his four-and-a-half-year reign in Tokyo, has developed close ties with President Ronald Reagan. Yet, over the same period, Japan's trade surplus with the United States, reflecting at least in part Japan's reluctance to buy American, has more than quadrupled to nearly $60 billion, and resentments against Japan have deepened.

Legislators gave Lee Kuan Yew a standing ovation during his October 1985 address after he told them of Ja-ban's reluctance to import even from other Asian nations and urged members of Congress to "coerce Japan with all the power at America's command." The members are following his advice. In the congressional hopper are a number of bills aimed at "bashing" Japan. One, for example, calls on the president to retaliate for Japan's failure to live up to a semiconductor trade agreement. A Senate trade bill labels Japan outright as an "adversary." The United States would have to curb imports from Japan and other surplus countries under a House bill expected to clear by Easter.

This may be the year in which the string runs out on Capitol Hill," warned the U.S. trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter. "The level of frustration with Japan is higher than I have ever seen it."

Although Mr. Reagan would probably veto legislation forcing trade retaliation against Japan, Mr. Yeutter warned in an interview that a veto could become "irrelevant" should such legislation clear overwhelmingly, as is now indicated.

But Japanese resistance to U.S. trade demands is also strengthening, mainly because the dramatic shift in the yendollar relationship has burt export-oriented industries and brought a new phenomenon to Japan - rising unemployment. So as Mr. Nakasone admires Washington's cherry blossoms, the two nations will be facing what many analysts believe is their most serious trade confrontation of the postwar period.

Nakasone and Reagan: Is this the Year of the Showdown?

Japan has just reported that unem-oyment rose in January to 3 percent, the highest level since monthly reporting began in 1953. Although it is less than half the U.S.

unemployment rate, the Japanese figure, which means nearly two million are unemployed, has caused a deepening anxiety that is being reflected in less resilient Japanese positions at the trade bargaining table.

One big worry is that corporate expansion in the United States and elsewhere overseas is leading to a "hollowing out" of the industrial base in Japan. recent government report predicts that domestic employment opportuni-ties will shrink by 600,000 jobs by the year 2000.

The mounting frustrations on both sides have stiffened negotiating positions, making compromises less likely on a whole range of issues from semiconductors and supercomputers to the awarding of contracts for a mammoth $8.5 billion airport construction project in Osaka Bay. S. Bruce Smart Jr., undersecretary of commerce for international trade administration, who recently returned from negotiations on semiconductors and supercomputers in Tokyo, said be found the Japanese positions "clearly a lot tougher than ever before." These are the most pressing of a number of specific trade conflicts:

 Semiconductors: Japan agreed last July to open its market to sales of American computer chips. The target was $2 billion of additional exports in five years. The Japanese also agreed to help ensure that Japanese companies quit "dumping" chips in the United States and third-country markets at below fair value, "Clearly, we are very disturbed that Japan has not fulfilled its obligations under that agreement said Mr. Yeutter. [In Tokyo, Trade Ministry officials on Monday annonnced a cut in production of semiconductors to avert U.S. sanctions.] · Kansai Airport: The Japanese are building an island in Osaka Bay for a huge airport to service the Osaka region. But U.S. and other foreign compunies are effectively barred from any of the major construction work. The Associated General Contractors, the trade body for the U.S. construction industry, wants the U.S. government to file an unfair trade practices complaint under Section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974. A more draconian alternative is for the United States to bar Inpanese companies from bidding on U.S. airport construction projects. Legislation to do this has been introduced by Senator Frank H. Murkowski, Republican of Alaska.

• Supercomputers: The Reagan ad-ministration has begun a formal investigation of Japanese partiers to the import of these huge and unusually last computers, which cost up to $20 million each. Despite an acknowledged technological lead over the Japanese, the Unit-ed States has only 23 percent of the Japanese supercomputer market, compared with 86 percent in the rest of the world. The U.S. industry has not sold any supercomputers to the Japanese public sector. The investigation could lead to a formal trade complaint and retaliation.

· Auto parts: The annual deficit in U.S. auto-parts trade with Japan has risen to roughly $7 billion a year. Since a 1980 agreement, the Japanese have bought only $200 million of U.S. parts. The agreement had called for purchases of $300 million in 1981 alone. Now the United States is again pressing the Japanese for greater access, this time within the framework of the so-called MOSS (Market-Oriented Sector Selective) talks. So far, the Japanese have agreed only to provide information, a breakdown of the broad categories of Japanese auto-parts purchases,

هكناهن للتحل

The tensions with Japan are rising despite the acknowledgment by many in the United States that the loss of U.S. competitiveness is at least as important an element in the trade imbalance as unfair trade practices in Japan or any other country. The Japanese Embassy's economic counselor, Yoshidji Nogami, pointed to the "growing feeling in Japan that the trade problems between the two countries are rooted in the U.S. situation." Against the rising acrimony, some analysts still see a turn for the better in the trade situation and fear that excessive U.S. pressure will be counterproductive. "I believe we are going to see a trade improvement in the coming months," said Robert Z. Lawrence, senior fellow at the Brookings Institution. "It is clear that the Japanese are beginning to be hammered in third-markets in terms of price competitiveness."

"Japan bashing will not belp in this environment," said George R. Packard.

dean of the School of Advanced International Studies of Johns Hopkins University and director of the Edwin O. Reischauer Center for East Asian Studies. "It will cause more resentment, make it more difficult to get concessions and trouble the waters for Naka-SODC.

OKYO - In a world of floating currencies, the policy maker drowns. If the financial and monetary authorities of the major industrialized nations have learned anything during two years of trying to solve economic imbalances by juggling with exchange rates, this must

The rapid 40 percent fall of the dollar gainst the yen since the September 1985 New York agreement between the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain and France to knock down the overvalued dollar has achieved almost nothing that was expected of it,

Figures sometimes lie, but not in this case. Japan's trade surplus with the world shows no signs of a rapid turn-around, despite the loss of price competitiveness in Japan's major market, the United States. Meanwhile, U.S. exporters seem unable to achieve a quick rise in overseas sales, despite the much more attractive prices of their goods in Japan because of the weak dollar. In Japan, the structural distortions of the domestic market, coupled with and aggravated by the inability of the govemment to come up with a solid reflationary package, have reinforced the harmful effects of the strong yea on the economy. Japan is facing a mini-recession, which could turn serious. The government is caught in a dilemma: It is committed to holding down spending so as to wipe out a dangerous national debt, yet locked into promises to its U.S. and European allies to reflate its economy.

On March 10, Japan announced a $7.13 billion February trade surplus, have as much power to influence markets and economies as they thought. The very rapid rise of the yen against the dollar has meant that trade figures on a dollar basis have jumped, yet Japanese companies' profits on a yen basis bave slumped.

The apparent success of the Group of Five after New York in devaluing the dollar by concerted intervention and by official policy statements blinded policy makers to the underlying currency movements. By the time of the New York meeting, the dollar was already on the way down, from a high of more than 260 yen at the beginning of 1985 through about 240 in September down in just over 150 now. The Group of Five hit a market that wanted the dollar down. Now that most market operators are still dollar sellers but the authorities want stabilized rates, the governments are finding it much harder to keep currencies where they want them.

In January, the Bank of Japan just managed to stop the dollar falling below 150 yen, at the cost of buying almost $9 billion in the open market. Last month, the chairman of the U.S. Council of Economie Advisers, Beryl W. Sprinkel, told Japan that central bank intervention was no longer effective in stabilizing the market, which had grown too big to handle.

Market dealers agree that any concerted economic policy package among the five nations would have a tremendous impact on subbilizing rates.

However, the rapid breakup of last October's U.S.-Japanese pact to stabilize the yen against the dollar in return for more Japanese domestic economic stimulation, and the subsequent weak results from the Group of Five meeting. in Paris this year, make that prospect highly unlikely, senior dealers believe.

Such a move has also been undermined by a distortion in currency rates stemming from the yea's depreciation against European currencies. Compared with two years ago, the yen has hardly moved against the European Currency Unit, which stands at about 175 yen. It is now falling against individual European currencies, especially the Deutsche mark.

A good reason has been healthy European sales to Japan. However, Japan has had even better sales to the European Community as Japanese companies switch out of their now underpriced U.S. market, Brussels has started to complain.

OKYO - Japanese investors face a curious paradox — they have remains occessary." "Also, sound financial bases more money to invest than ever, but they are scrambling to figure out where to invest it. The Japanese government has responded to the urgency of its investors and foreign pressure for financial liberalization. It has eased regulations on investment overseas and at home and is opening new Japanese markets to encourage domestic fund-raising and trading. But it is caught between the need to liberalize and the fear of losing control, leaving some investors frustrated by the cautious pace of progress. Speaking at a recent international financial conference in Tokyo, Sugio Hatanaka, a Finance Ministry official, said that "although we are strong proponents of deregulation, protection of small investors or depositors ...

are a precondition for business activity by financial institutions." he said. "Therefore, it is necessary to maintain a harmonious balance between deregulation and these requirements. Japan has amassed money for iovestment in line with the growth of its huge current account surplus. Its national pen-chant for savings has brought private assets to total more than $6 direct overseas investment to-taled $83.6 billion. The Ministry of International Trade and Industry estimates that such investment by manufacturers will grow 14 percent annually until the year

Such investment in the 1970s centered on developing Asian countries where labor was cheap. But by the late 1970s trade fric-tion had intensified and direct investment spread to developed nations, especially the United States, which now absorbs more than 30 percent of the total.

Japanese are also looking overseas for financial investment, also mostly in the United States. Most institutions, however, have not yet fulfilled the Finance Ministry's new quotas on foreign investment, which were raised last year for certain funds in ease capital outflows.

Investors say they want to spread their risk and take advantage of the best yields available worldwide, but until late last year they held off equities because of fluctuating currencies. "It's not a question of internationalization, it's the possibility of profits," said Isao Ushikubo, general manager of the pension fund department at Toyo Trust and Banking Co. "Pension funds are domestic Japanese money, so there's no essen-tial need to move in foreign stocks. We do it when there is a clear possibility of better prof-

with wife and children but in time for a chat and for a look at his fifth-grade son's homework. "My work is my rice bowl," he said. "But my family is what makes my life worth living." Nor are anthoppers only male. Kyoko Sato man-ages a small television production company. She spends long hours, day and night, dealing with clients at home and abroad, researching story projects, arranging interviews and camera crews. But her weekends are sacred. She saves and spends with care. Her designer clothing is Japanese but she buys Italian cottons and wears an Omega watch.

"I buy things because they fit my taste," she said. "They may be Japanese or foreign, or even com-pletely nameless. I don't want something just be-cause someone else has it. And this tendency scema to be even stronger among younger people. They are always on the lookout for something different, something that will express their own tastes.

Even consumers of the ant generation - "worka-holics living in rabbit hutches," as a European Community official caustically called them - have reached what the media calls the "silver age" and are much more in the mood to spend than they would have been a decade ago. They have paid their housing loans. Their chil-dren are independent. And with life expectancy lengthening dramatically (now nearly 75 years for men, more than 80 for women), most silver-age consumers are still in the prime of life. They go on trips to Hawaii or to Paris. They have hobbies. As in Mr. Ono's case. exorbitant land costs keep living space within rabbit-hutch dimensions. However, in home after home, this space is being rear-ranged as gleaming Western-style kitchens and bathrooms replace gloomy traditional interiors. The lowly water closet and its forebear, the privy, are being transformed by an amazing array of softly gurgling devices, some combining the functions of toilet and bidet.

None of this makes Japan necessarily an easier place for Western companies to do business with. The Japanese distribution system remains infuriatingly unwieldy and inefficient. Japanese enstomers are legendary for their fussiness and intolerance even of slight defects. Furthermore, despite a string of market-opening measures, many Japanese com-panies keep foreign companies at arm's length.

Dentsn, the average Japanese couple can look for-ward to at least five trips abroad, and these trips often feature special interests such as fishing, cook-ing or art history rather than simple sightseeing. Japanese tour operators are beginning to cher the cruise ship business. And for young people, homecruise ship business. And for young people, nome-stays abroad are often their first venture away from their own homes. In the process, they find, they sometimes have more in common with non-japa-nese their own age than they do with their percents. For most of the 40 years since World. some analysts suggesting it has yet to reach botton In the space of less than a year,

Japanese companies became about 50 percent less competitive vis-à-vis the outside world than they had been. The first to feel the crunch were small and medium-sized export industries, cutlery and chinaware makers, for in-stance, that had few eash reserves to fall back on. Soon the effects worked their way through to the giants of Japanese exports steel, cars and electronics.

The economy slowed to 2.5 percent real growth in 1986. The growth figure for this year is likely to be in the range of 1.5 percent to 2.5 percent, many private-sec-tor economists say. Official goverment projections showing growth a point or so higher for the year beginning April 1 are widely dismissed as politically inspired pipe dreams. The damage would be worse were it not for the strong yen's effect of making Japan's imports cheaper. In oil, the country got a spectacular windfall: Not only did the OPEC dollar-denominated price go down, but now fewer yen were required to buy each dollar. Measured in yen, the 1986 oil bill fell a startling 60 percent. Lower import bills fed a trend that the Japanese find increasing-ly embarrassing: the expansion, despite the drastic currency realignments, of their trade surpluses as measured in dollars. In bilateral accounts with the United States, the gauge that worries them most, it grew from $50 bil-lion in 1985 to about $59 billion in 1986, by U.S. calculation.

Japanese statistics show that in volume terms (the numbers of cars, video cassette recorders, etc., shipped), exports came down a marginal 1.2 percent in 1986. Officials say the dollar figures will follow suit in 1987, due to the so-called J-curve effect of lagging response. Fears now are that the U.S. Congress will not be willing to wait. "I am very much con-cerned about the difference between the political clock and the economic clock," said Michihiko Kunihiro, chief of the Japanese cabinet committee on external af-

The Japanese feel that, as usual, the Western industrialized world does not understand the sacrifices they are making. Despite havoc in its industries, they oote, the U.S. Congress has moved closer than ever to passing a comprehensive trade bill Avoidance of such a bill has been a prime objective of Japanese trade policy for years. By the standards of the United States and Western Europe, the sacrifices Japan has made remain small. Although in March unemployment hit a record postwar high of 3 percent, it is still a figure that most Western countries would love to call their own. Inflation is near zero and interest rates are lower than ever. But with stability and predictability highly desired in all walks of life in Japan, the events of recent months are deeply troubling. Altogether, the five major steel producers sustained losses from steel operations of $1.2 billion in the April-September period last year. Production is expected to fall from around 100 million tons to 90 million tons as all compa-nies carpet out conscipto 90 million tons as all compa-nies carry out capacity cuts on a par with those being done by Nippon Steel, the world's largest producer. In all, 42,500 employ-ces will be cut, mostly through attrition and transfers to related companies. The anto inclustry has been shaken by news of No. 2 producer Nissan Motor Co.'s first losses in its history, $130 million between April 1 and Sept. 30. The cash-flush Toyota Motor Corp., the has recorded steep drops in prof-itability levels, as have most other producers. The electronics indus-try, meanwhile, is facing similar loss of competitiveness.

loss of competitiveness. In many cases, companies are shifting production to the United States or to the low-cost environ-ments of neighbors such as Tai-wan and South Korea. In the meantime, Japan is concerned to see those countries' companies minutes at its basis see those countries companies nipping at its heels. The strong yen appears also to be accelerating slightly Japan's gradual but steady movement. into an economy dominated by services rather than manufactur ing and agriculture. Already about 57 percent of the work force is employed in distribution, sales and services, up from about 53 percent 10 years ago. As manufacturing wilts under the yea's impact, resources are expected to shift toward services.

Some service-related companies - travel agencies offering package tours abroad, for in-stance have had direct windfalls from the new yea.

While Japan's export machine is being forcibly pared down, do-mestic demand is not in a position to pick up much of the slack Investment in plant and equip-ment is likely to ramain low re-1987. Housing starts are expected to drop below their 1986 levels. The recession has led labor unions to scale back their wage demands in their annual "spring offensive." Combined with rising unemployment, this will weaken consumer spending.

The picture is not much better for government spending. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has made a national crusade of "fiscal reconstruction," the eventual balancing of a national budget that proportionately is more dependent on borrowing than that of the United States. The government has now promised to step up domestic demand and senior figures in the rolling Liberal Dem-ocratic Party are talking of a need to break with fiscal conservation. But it seems unlikely the government will move to expansionary spending in a major way. Tink?-ing is the more likely alternative. The tax system, meanwhile, is a wild card of sorts. Mr. Nakasone had proposed — and seemed to have sewed up — a far-reaching rewriting of the postwar tax system to cut personal and corporate : income tax rates and impose a 5percent sales tax on many goods and services. But the sales tax has brought strong resistance from opposition parties, sided by a few defectors within the ruling camp. The plan's future is now in doubt. Despite the unfavorable news, however, there are optimists to be found. Some economists suggest that 1987 will put Japan over the hump in adjusting to the strong yen and more ready than ever to compete on world markets.

VOKYO - Masae Kimura, a 43-yearold housewife, works in a box-mak-2.2.2 ing factory six days a week, seven hours a day. She has Sundays and hours a day. She has Sundays and holidays off, but that is the only watching the sets unless she takes a few days at vacation she gets inless she takes a tew days at ther own expense. She gets no paid vacation, no is health insurance, no bonuses, no retirement pay, and if she leaves work early, she forfeits the hourly wage of 550 yen (about $3.60, or 40 cents above the minimum 488 yen).
 Mrs. Kimura is one of 3.5 million part-time women workers who made up 22.7 percent of the work force in 1986. Although her 42-hour week is labeled "part-time," the maximum full-time schedule is 48 hours a week. According to the Ministry of Labor, many companies are reducing the 48-hour week, which is thought excessive for full-time employees. Mis. Kimura considers her situation an improvement over the days when there were few portunities for part-time work.

Things are a little better now," she said in the office of the Edogawa Union, a Tokyo local confederation of labor leaders and small-company workers, full-time and part-time. "When I began working about 17 years ago as a cierk in a supermarket, my children were in kinder-garten and not many mothers had a part-time job. Or they worked very few hours.

These days, with nursery and day care available, they are working longer hours. Com-panies prefer them as cheap labor." Talking to the amiable, unflappable Mrs. Kimura, one would hardly guess that she is a heroine to her sister part-timers. An unassuming woman, she hurries home after her job ends at 5 o'clock to make supper for her husband, then gets on a city bus to go to union headquar-ters and work on local labor affairs.

In 1984, she was something of a firebrand, a fighter determined to retrieve wages that she had earned but that a bankrupt company re-fused to pay. That year, Masae Kimura was working in a box-kunch factory, preparing meals to be sold daily. The company went bankrupt, the president disappeared and none of the 46 employees, all part-timers, received their wages for two months.

"Most of us were women, with only five men," Mrs. Kimura recalled. "Many of them gave up trying to get the money, but I couldn't give up 200,000 yen, about $1,000 then. I called the government's branch labor office and they told me about the local union.

"I brought 30 people with me who were laid off at the box-lunch company. After 18 months we got the money back. It was an important incident at the beginning of this union, the Edogawa local."

The local had been formed less than six months earlier with 37 members to represent part-time workers. With the efforts of the mion's leaders, most of the missing wages were paid to the 46 employees. Masae Kimura is now a vice-chairman of the local, which has 256 members.

With the number of part-time working wom-en tripling since 1970, unions have begun to support them. Women, once called "throwaways" in the Japanese labor market, represent 70 percent of part-time workers. Women who work part-time have become essential in an economy where the 3 percent unemployment rate is a record high. They are being used in blue (or pink) collar jobs in small factories, restaurants and coffee shops, grocery stores and department stores and other service indus-

In Edogawa Ward, where Mrs. Kimura works and lives, there are more than 6,000 offices and factories. "They are small compa-nies that can't afford full-time workers," said uniou chairman Masaalo Kodama. "The average staff is ten people, often only two or three. Many workers and businesses need consciousness-raising about part-time employees."

The union and Mrs. Kimura would like to effect two important changes in government policy: One is to increase the maximum annual income allowed to a dependent sponse from 900,000 yen, about $5,882, to 1.2 million yen, about $7,843.

"Tm trying on purpose not to earn over 900,000 yen," said Mrs, Kimura. "When we find my earnings getting up there, I take time time until they marry and that they accept the iniquities without complaint.

Ministry of Labor statistics show that 85.9 percent are married, that their average age is 42 and 78.5 percent of them are 35 or older. They have two children. They choose part-time employment because of somewhat flexible hours and working conditions that allow them to manage housework and children. Since Mrs. Kimura works in her neighborhood, like many women, she is able to return home on the lunch hour to do the laundry.

The overriding reason for women to work at all is that they need the money. Nearly 56 percent work to supplement the family income, while another 13.5 percent provide the main income of the family. The remainder say they want to improve their standard of living, have money for hobbies and trips and spend their free time usefully.

Some of these part-time women workers have been leaders in separate efforts to im-prove their working conditions. For 20 years in Japanese courts they have protested unfair labor practices against part-time employees. In 1967, a woman working for a Tokyo cakemaking company was fired after six months although she had been hired as a part-timer for a year. The court agreed that there was no reason to fire her, and the case set a precedent against such arbitrary dismissal.

At age 65, about 50,000

Junko Oshima, of the Policy Planning Divi-sion, and Reiko Hamada, of the Women's Labor Division, in the Ministry of Labor, said that officials were neutral on the issue, that it depended on the job market.

Because of the changes the Japanese economy is undergoing as it moves from heavy industry to the service and retail-wholesale industries, where peak hours vary, the demand for female part-timers is increasing, the two officials said.

Since 1981, the Public Employment Security Bureau, an arm of the Ministry of Labor, has run job placement offices nationally, Called "part bank," Japanese-English for a part-time workers' agency, they are located in large department stores and major train stations. The present 37 "part banks" help place part-timers companies registered with them. Five new "part banks" are scheduled to be added.

In 1984 the Ministry of Labor published a Part-Time Workers Guideline reminding businesses that the Labor Standards Law applies to part-time employees, too. in November 1986, the ministry organized a 10-day campaign to alert the public to their problems.

A telephone botline in Tokyo and 10 other areas has been set up by local unions for the use of troubled part-timers.

The harsh criticism of Yoko Sano, a labor economist at Keio University in Tokyo, may no longer be true. In 1985, she said: "In Europe and the United States, they use immigrant labor. In Japan, we use women."

Japanese. About 37 companies in fields ranging from shipbuilding to electronics have announced 45,000 layoffs. The coal industry will lay off 10,000 miners from a total work force of 24,000. Labor Ministry officials say 38 percent of manufacturing firms have already reduced their work forces as a result of recent changes stemming from the yen's rise.

Added to the thousands of jobs being phased out by declining industries are nearly a million new jobs that Japan's still competitive antomobile and electronics companies intend sures at home in order to stay competitive abroad. In many cases, this has meant the to transfer overseas in the next 15 years. plants and the transfer of work to lower wage

Japanese business leaders say they have no choice but to move production abroad. "Since the sudden increase in the value of the yen our expenditure on wages is now six times what our competitors pay in the newly industrializing countries," said Takashi Kashiwagi, a director of Hitachi Ltd.

Labor Ministry officials estimate that the high yen has driven 50 percent of Japan's leading manufacturers to move part of their production overseas. Those that are not actualy moving factories abroad are cutting down domestic production and increasing procurement of parts from abroad.

Strange as it may seem, however, Japanese unemployment is hardly perceptible to the outsider. According to official figures, joblessness stood at 3 percent in January, compared with 11.6 percent in Britain, 10.5 percent in France, 9 percent in West Germany and 6.9 percent in the United States.

tion of Employers' Associations, stressed in a recent interview that Japanese companies must make utmost efforts and find ways not to fire employees. Unless we do so, the trust between management and workers will be in jeopardy." But it is difficult to tell whether Japanese workers will be any less resentful of employers if instead of being fired they are shunted off to low-pressige, dead-end work at affiliated companies as part of a process of involuntary transfers.

The specter of large-scale unemployment has cast a shadow on this year's annual spring labor offensive, or shunto, the period when Japanese unions negotiate for higher wages. In previous years, steel workers were the first to settle their contracts and the wage increases they received acted as a barometer for other industries. This year, however, steel workers are demanding job security; wage increases are out of the question.

Although lifetime employment never extended to more than 20 percent of Japan's labor force, there is little doubt that in the next three years even fewer Japanese workers will be allowed to stay on until retirement. According to Mr. Otsuki, if all Japanese companies make the effort to retrain workers and resort to transfers instead of dismissals, Japan's unemployment rate "will be contained at the 3 percent level." But a government report re-leased in early March predicts unemployment will reach 4 percent by 1990. Indications are that a number of Japanese

OKYO - For Japan, President Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Iniuative program offers both opportunities and perils. The lure of access to the frootiers of high technology and the desire to cement security links with its U.S. ally drives Japan forward into participation in SDI. Yet, fears that Pentagon security regulations will block commercial use of research results, and worries about the political fallout of joining SDL restrain Japanese enthusiasm. The Reagan administration's talk of "early deployment" of SD1 anti-missile systems, perhaps by 1993, has heightened such concerns. When Edward L. Rowny, the U.S. arms control adviser, visited Tokyo recently to discuss this issue with Japanese officials, they politely reminded him of the terms of their decision to join SD1.

"Japanese officials explained our basic posi-tion on SDI participation," said Yukio Oka-moto, director of national security affairs for the Foreign Ministry. In September the government laid out a number of conditions, several of which were emphasized to Mr. Rowny. Those were, according to Mr. Okamoto, "that the initiative should be carried out in conformity with the ABM [anti-ballistic missile] treaty; that consultation with allies and negotiations with the Soviet Unioo should precede actual deployment: and that the decision of the government of Japan was made to join a research program."

Mr. Rowny reassured the Japanese that they would indeed be consulted before any decision oo deployment was made. Publicly, the government was satisfied. Privately, an official said, they were worried about the enthusiasm expressed by Mr. Rowny about certain "breakthroughs" in technology that could allow early deployment of SDI systems. The official described these as space-based "kinetic kill vehicles" and some ground-based systems.

There is some skepticism over the reality of such claims of technology advance. More seriously, the official said, the Japanese feel that the Americans underestimate the political difficulty this can cause the Japanese government. The opposition parties, without exception, have been opposed to an SDI role, viewing it as a violation of the constitutional bar to joining collective security arrangements. Those parties, a Foreign Ministry official fears, are sure to question the government's assurance last September that they are only joining a "re-search program designed to provide technical and a half after the U.S. offer was first made by Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger. That decision followed a prolonged study of the program, involving not only government officials but representatives of 21 of Japan's leading high-technology and military productioo firms.

Since September, the Japanese and U.S. gov-ernments have been engaged in careful and ernments have been engaged in careful and prolonged negotiations on a framework agree-ment to govern the participation of private firms and government research labs. Earlier, U.S. officials had hoped to conclude those talks by the end of the year. Now, a Japanese government official said, "we don't feel a strong pressure to reach a hasty agreement, although we would like to conclude this as sooo as possible."

The key issue in the talks, Japanese officials say, is the insistence oo guarantees that they will be able to take advantage of the results of their research work. SDI offers Japanese companies a valuable path into frootiers of high technology. But they are greatly concerned that Pentagon security regulations will not only void those benefits but could lock up Japanese high technology brought into the program.

This issue was at the center of difficult talks on West German participatioo in SDL Japa-nese officials say privately that they are unhappy with the German agreement, which is reported to reserve the Pentagon's right to own and classify the results of any research work. That agreement is secret, though a purported copy of it was leaked last year to a West German newspaper. "There is considerable interest" in SD1 among Japanese companies, said an official of the Ministry of loternational Trade and Industry. "But they are somewhat cautious, too. They want the government to clear the passage for them, and only after that they will start walking across

Military Budget Creeps Over Magic Mark and the Alarm Bells Sound

By Sam Jameson

OKYO - To Yuko Kurihara, the director of Japan's Defense Agency, critics such as former U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who believe Japan will transform itself into a military giant, are mistaking ghosts of the past for realities of the present.

"Kissinger may be a great man, but on this point, be doesn't understand," Mr. Kurihara said in an interview.

In a widely circulated article, Mr. Kissinger said that a decisioo by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to lift an arbitrary ceiling of 1 percent of gross national product on military pending "makes it inevitable that Japan will emerge as a major military power in the oot-too-distant future." The most immediate effect of the decision was to increase Japan's fiscal 1987 military budget by $89.3 million more than it could have been raised otherwise, A budget that last year was equal to 0.997 percent of GNP will amount this year to 1.004 percent.

By fiscal 1990, Japan will be capable of withstanding a limited, small-scale attack, a goal it has been seeking since 1976, when the cabinet originally fixed the 1 percent limit. Even after 1990, however, it will not be able to defend its sea lanes. Nor are there any indications that Japan might ooe day come to possess, or even wish to possess, ouclear weapons, bombers, seaborne landing capability or ground troops able to stage foreign invasions. Yet, along with Mr. Kissinger, opposition forces in Japan have warned that the decisioo will once again turn Japan into a military giant. Chinese leaders, too, have expressed this fear, Mr. Kurihara said such critics were getting the past confused with the present, "In the old days, the military was the emperor's military.... It utilized the emperor's power of supreme command ... to move politics. Military men ... held a veto. If [civilians] refused to listen, they could keep out of a cabinet an army minister or a navy minister" and thus prevent the formation of a government, Mr. Kurihara said.

Today, no elected prime minister, the commander of what Japan now calls the Self-Defense Forces, could ignore the parliament or the people, who, in Mr. Kurihara's mind, constitute the most powerful limit on increases in military spending.

Parliamentary democracy has been firmly established in Japan. Mr. Kurihara said, and we should hold more pride and faith in it."

One of Japan's leading military experts, retired General Hiroomi Kurisu, a former chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, agreed. In a separate interview, he said that transforming Japan into a military power would mean, first, giving the Air Self-Defense Force an attack capability, including bombers, which it does not have. The Maritime Self-Defense Force would have to be able to launch sea-borne landings, a capability "they don't have at all now." The Ground Self-Defense Forces would need "at least 500,000 troops," or more than twice the present strength, he said. Nuclear weapons, too, could make Japan a military power, although "I do think Japan could become kind of a military giant even without nuclear weapons," said General Knrisu, who is known as a "hawk." But "as a matter of reality," he said, none of . the elements needed to become a military power stand any possibility of winning approval from the people, "certainly not in this century, and even as far into the next century as is conceivable at present."

Mr. Kurihara said there also were physical limitations on military strength.

"Japan is a small, narrow country," he said. "What would we do if we bought 300 or 400 F-15s, for example? We have no airstrips for them. ... It's nearly impossible to describe how hard it is even to obtain an area to conduct a military exercise."

In addition, the Self-Defense Forces cannot recruit enough volunteers, he said. The ground, air and maritime forces have 241,000 members, compared with a World War II peak of more than eight million. Authorized strength is 272,000.

To General Kurisu, giving Japan adequate military power would require 1.5 percent to 1.7 percent of the GNP. But so sensitive is the public to military spending that "even to get to 1.1 percent of the GNP in defense budgets in the next five years would be an accomplishment," he said.

With the cabinet decision to allow spending for the five fiscal years between 1986 and 1990 to reach a total of 18.4 trillion yen ($122.7 hillion), Japan will be able to expand its military budgets in each of the next three years by "about 5.4 percent," Mr. Kurihara said. That will virtually ensure the achievement of goals

Japan set in weapons and equipment procure-ment under a 1976 outline, he added. The outline provided for 62 frigates, 93 P-3C anti-submarine aircraft and 320 jet fighters, including 163 F-15 Eagles. General Kurisu, however, said such a result would still leave Japan's armed forces with shortcomings.

The spending plan will also fail to bring Japan up to the standards the United States would like to see. Although Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger has said publicly he would like Japan to be able by 1989 to defend its sca lanes out to a distance of 1,000 miles (1,610 kilometers) from Tokyo and Osaka, Mr. Kurihara said only that such ability would be achieved "to a considerable degree" by 1991.

General Kurisu predicted that sea lane defense would not be achieved until 2000 if the current pace of spending continues. At least one additional flotilla would be needed, he

The military budget now before the parlia-ment calls for 3.52 trillion yen in spending for nese motives. Japan, however, must keep trying to convince them of its commitment to peace, he said.

Mr. Kuribara said he will tell Chinese leaders when he visits Beijing later this year that Japan "frankly" accepts its responsibility for its war with China and that "we not only won't do it again, but cannot do it again."

He said he welcomed the fact that Washington opposed the idea of Japan becoming a military power. Under the U.S.-Japan security treaty, he said, "the United States should accept the responsibility for Japan not becoming a military giant" by "rescoing us from whatev-er deficiencies [we have]."

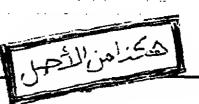

Both Mr. Kurihara and General Kurisu said the chief long-term significance of lifting the 1-percent-of-GNP limit would be to refocus debate in Japan from sums of money to what the country actually needs for defense.

- "Fussing about 1 percent is nonsense," Mr. Kunihara said, "This doesn't focus on the substance of defense, which is what should be debated."

The 1 percent limit, General Kurisu said, was "a formalistic obstacle that stood in the way of thinking about goals of substance in defense." Its removal, however, will provide no more than a stepping stone toward a realistic of debate, he said.

TARIS - What every woman needs at this point is a good pair of scissors. As the ready-to-wear collections keep unfolding, skirts keep climbing. But otherwise, with Dior, Givenchy and Chanel, things were back to normal with expensive, understandable clothes --- and goodbye madness.

At Chanel's, Karl Lagerfeld had fun taking apart the Chanel look, then putting it back together again. It worked and this was a peach of a collection, Skirts were ultra-short with legs outlined in opaque pantyhose. Laced-up booties or flat shoes replaced the famous beige and black lady-like shoes. All of which would have made Coco Chanel, who hated the mini, very unhappy.

Lagerfeld cropped everything short, including boleros, and re-placed Chanel's classic blouses with turtlenecks.

The classic Chanel suit kept disintegrating as Lagerfeld threw tweed jackets over jacquard knit tunics that were more micro than mini. Tunics were also topped by twin-sets or long cardigans. Asymetrical fringed skirts were so minuscule they looked like fringed cashmere scarves.

Worldwide Securities Boom Passes Dutch Market By By EMMA ROBSON

Reuters

MSTERDAM --- While exchanges around the world revel in the general securities boom, the Dutch stock market remains lackluster despite a series of largely positive annual corporate results and signs of a more stable dollar, analysts have said.

Prices and turnover on the Amsterdam Stock Exchange have sprung back from lows reached when the dollar dipped below the 2 guilder mark in January. The ANP-CBS general index, which was at 259.20 on Jan. 29, stood at 278.60 at the close of trading But market analysts say only lower interest rates or a further

The dollar's current level compares with an average in 1986 of 2.45 guilders, and 3.35 in 1985, official figures show. But Arjen Los, analyst with the Dutch merchant bank Pierson.

Heldring & Pierson, said there was room for some optimism. "The market is exaggerating the whole dollar affair," he said. "We've seen the bottom of its decline. But what is lacking is a stimulus on the interest rate front."

"The scope for price rises in Dutch shares is narrow, given the limited room for lower interest rates," Mr. Los said. He added that the Dutch market could only dream of the returns of around 15 percent that are seen in rising markets elsewhere in Europe.

WHEN THE DOLLAR slumped in the second half of 1986, U.S. and British investors were heavy sellers of Dutch stock. They made an enormous currency gain, according to Mr. Menco of Bank CLN. /

Figures from the Finance Ministry show that foreign investment in Dutch stock last year fell by nearly half to 4.2 billion guilders ($2.03 billion).

Mr. Los of Pierson envisaged no significant revival of foreign interest in the Dutch market. He said he expected that the large, liquid pension funds in the Netherlands would pursue a more aggressive portfolio management policy while continuing to invest in markets with weaker currencies.

Outflows of nonbank Dutch capital were a record 21.4 billion guilders last year, 12.3 billion of which stemmed from securities transactions

Koos ten Have of Staal Bankiers said that Dutch institutions had been rallying to buoyant foreign markets, but this season's results could coax some of them back to the relatively underpriced Dutch market.

Mr. ten Have said Dutch price/earnings ratios based on forecasts of 1987 results were broadly unchanged compared with 1986. With an average ratio of 10, they were still attractively lower than shares of other exchanges, he added.

He said the reliability of the strong guilder was a further factor favoring investments in stock of Dutch companies.

Senior bank economists said that last week's official economic forecast by the CPB planning agency painted a gloomy picture of the Netherlands economy but this would not shake investor confidence in the country's business sector. The economy of the Netherlands was doing relatively well compared with that of other nations, they added.

Analysts say most companies have fulfilled expectations, while some concerns, particularly in food and publishing, surprised the market with continued solid profit growth despite major invest-ments denominated in dollars and British pounds.

O'Rourke, chief executive of the direct labor averaged only 15 percent of total manufacturing cost, compared with 53 percent for materials and 32 percent for overhead. This emphasis on labor costs and labor productivity has resulted in less attention to material costs and the problems involved with excess inventory and has obscured the fact that overhead offers twice the opportunity for cutting costs. On the positive side, the study found that the overwhelming majority of the executives surveyed said improving product quality was their top priority. This attitude, it noted, "is a dramatic shift from 20 years ago, when cost-competitiveness was the focus."

Jefferies Case Raises Fears of a Broader Inquiry

By James Sterngold New York Times Service

NEW YORK - A Wall Street practice that some securities industry executives say is common may be coming under scrutiny by federal regulators as being illegal, fueling concerns that the current trading scandal may broaden. That practice relates to how securities are priced when offered to the public, and how

The U.S. currency dropped to close at 150.025 yen, from 151.375 ven at the close Friday. Its previous post-World War II low was 150.45 in Tokyo on Jan. 19.

"The market is trying to test the tey 150 yen mark to see if the Bank of Japan intervenes to support it," said Daniel Holland, vice president at Discount Corp. of New York. "If they don't, the dollar should go to the 145-148 yen range."

The dollar also fell in New York igainst the Dentsche mark, to 18173 DM from 1.8280 Friday; against the Swiss franc, to 1.5205 france from 1.5305, and against the French franc, to 6.0525 francs from 6.0900

The British pound continued its rise, closing Monday at $1.6185 after $1.6045 on Friday.

Dealers said that in dollar-yen trading, there also was nervousness over warnings by the U.S. trade representative, Clayton K. Yentter, that the United States was prepared to retaliate against unfair The U.S. currency also fell against the Swiss franc, to close at 1.5235 trade practices by Japan.

The issues are whether Japan had teneged on an agreement made last year over semiconductors, indications by the Japanese govern-ment that it did not want U.S. supercomputers sold to public organizations in Japan and the freezing out of U.S. companies from bidding on the huge Osaka airport construction project, Mr.

Seoul Reports

United Press Inte SEOUL - The South Korean economy grew by an adjusted 12.5 percent last year, its highest growth rate in a decade. the Bank of Korea said in a provisional estimate Monday.

The gross national product reached $95.1 billion for the year, the bank said. It attributed the 1986 performance largely to growth in the manufacturing sector and brisk exports. The economy grew 13.4 percent in 1976.

Manufacturing expanded by 17.4 percent and exports rose 26.3 percent last year, the bank said. Heavy industry grew 23.5 percent, led by products including videotape recorders, ovens and automobiles, while light industry, including textile and rubber products, expanded by 9.7 percent.

German Bond Yields May Fall Now, Rise Later, Experts Say

FRANKFURT --- West German bond yields could decline over the next few months if recent efforts to stabilize exchange rates extend to keeping down European interest rates, banking economists said Monday. But in the longer term, domestic yields could rise under agreements to stimulate West Germany's economy, they said in interviews.

Last month's Paris accord among six leading industrial nations has so far successfully stabi lized currencies with the threat of central bank intervention, economists said. Economists speculated that the Group of Seven countries might try to bolster the pact by uncoupling U.S. and German interest rates further when they meet for the interim committcc of the International Monetary Fund in April. The Group of Seven is the six that met in Paris - United States, Japan, West Germany. France, Britain and Canada - plus Italy. The recent round of monetary accommoda tion by the Bundesbank and the Bank of Japan and the firming of the federal funds rate are significant. They mark an uncoupling of movements in U.S. and foreign interest rates, Salomon Bros Inc. said in a recent study.

The study said narrowing of international interest rate spreads was a major factor in the dollar's fall. These spreads will have to be widened if the dollar is to be stabilized. The president of the Bundesbank, Karl Otto Pohl, encouraged the United States not to cut interest rates in January when the Bundesbank cut its own rates by half a percentage point, to avoid weakening the dollar.

West German economists see room for further cuts in leading German rates if the dollar resumes its decline

The Bundesbank's average yield of public paper is already nearing last year's low. Last week, yields fell in around 5.50 percent, oot far from the 1986 low of 5.35 percent.

Economists said the trend may cause domesoc investors to shift some funds from short to onger-term paper. Such a move would tend to flatten the yield curve between sbort- and longterm rates.

It might also facilitate a further cut in leading rates, as the shift out of savings accounts into securities would slow growth of the Bundesbank's central bank money stock aggregate.

But conflicting with this trend are plans to augment West German tax reductions, part of the Paris currency pact that is designed to meet U.S. demands for faster growth in West Germany. This move may force interest rates up by essitating higher government borrowing.

Josef Korner, chief economist of the Wesi German economic forecasting institute IFO, said in a ocwspaper interview that he expected 1987 tax revenue to be 11 billion Deutsche marks ($6.02 billion) below estimates by the West German government in November.

Any tax shortfall in itself is unlikely to push yields up. But coupled with other factors such as waning foreign speculative buying of mark bonds on the dollar's decline, long-term yields may to have to rise, economists said.

Public borrowing in 1988 may also rise be cause of increases in the second phase of Bonn's tax package. The government is increasing tax cuts in 1988 by 5.2 billion DM to 14.4 billion.

There were no secret strategies to unveil in the second half. Paddio found the range early in the second half, hitting a three-pointer to cut lowa's lead to 64-52.

From then on, the margin melted like butter. UNLV scored 10 consecutive points, then 14 more after Brad Lohaus interrupted the comeback with a lay-up. Paddio had 9 of the points in the second streak, all on three-point baskets (UNLV made II of 30 overall). With a little more than eight minutes to play, the Rebels had charged to a 71-66 lead.

"We knew at halftime that it was far from over," said Tom Davis, the lowa coach. "When you have two running teams playing, you'll see bigger shifts in momentum. They just did everything better than we did in that half."

The smaller Rebels even outrebounded lows after halftime, and finished the game even (33-33) in that department. The Hawkeyes had not been outrebounded in any game this season. But led by Armon Gilliam, the 6-fony-9 (2.05meter) power forward who is their only true inside player, the Rebels were preventing lowa from getting second and third shots. Gilliam paced both teams with 27 points and 10 rebounds.

Defensive Pressure Helps Edge Mistake-Prone LSU, 77-76

Compiled by Our Staff From Dupatches CINCINNATI - In a game that lived up to its billing as a test of muscle and will, Indiana relied on resilience and capitalized oo mistakes to defeat Louisiana State, 77-76, here Sunday to earn a semifinal berth in the NCAA basketball tournament.

Indiana is the first Big Ten team to gain the Final Four since the it won the 1981 national championship. The Hoosiers trailed by 12 points in the second half, but used half-court raps and a string of outstanding individual defensive efforts to snatch away what seemed to be a fairytale victory from underdog LSU.

Rick Callowsy, Indiana's 6-foot-6 (1.98-meter) forward, banked in Daryl Thomas's air ball with seven seconds left to give Indiana a onepoint lead. After the teams traded time-outs --LSU first then Indiana - a turnaround jump shot by LSU's Nikita Wilson missed of the buzzer.

"Somebody said that Indiana's expected to win," said Bobby Knight, the winning coach. "I wasn't sure we could beat this team. I thought this team was as good a collection of athletes playing hard as I'd seen all season long, and ey work like hell on the defensive end.

Then Knight spoke of his own squad. "I have a tremendous feeling for these kids," he said. "When these kids were freshmen, they came within two plays of going to the NCAA finals." Steve Alford, the all-America guard, led Indi-added 16 points and Calloway, who was injured spread offense, they would sorely miss Woodearlier in the half and had to be helped from the court, scored 11. Keith Smart added 10 points.

"We had plenty of time," said Calloway, who had reinjured his heavily taped right knee with 14:31 left in the game. "Daryl's man challenged him and I saw the ball come my way. Usually you grab the ball, come down and then go back up, but I thought if I can just get it back up ain.... They had bigger guys inside, and I thought I might not get off another good shot. I had good control — I just put it on the glass, and let the glass put it in for me."

LSU called a time-out, then Indiana countered when the teams came on the court and Knight had a look at the LSU formation. Instead of playing man-to-man, as LSU expected, the Hoosiers played a three-quarter press. Fess Irvin weaved through it, fired a pass into Wil-son, the Tigers' 6-8 center who had already scored 20 points. With a second left, Wilson turned and fired, but the ball hit the rim and bounced off.

With Bernard Woodside shadowing Alford in a box-and-one, LSU broke from a 47-46 halftime deficit with seven straight points and led by 75-66 with 4 minutes 38 seconds left on a basket by Irvin, the freshman guard. But that's when the Tigers' slide began. After Anthony Lewis missed a three-pointer, Garrett dunked to make it 75-68. Joe Hillman, who had been put in for Smart, stole a pass from Irvin and drove for the basket; he scored and drew Woodside's fifth foul. Not only would the foul hurt LSU defensive-lead to 75-71 with 3:45 left Jose Vargas then lost the ball, and a pair of foul shots by Thomas cut the lead to 75-73. Smart then made one of the plays of the game. when he blocked the ball away from Darryl Joe on a three-on-two break. "That was as good a defensive play under the circumstances as I've seen." Knight said. "He got his hand on the ball, avoided the contact and we came op with the ball."

Thomas missed a jumper and Smart fouled Joe, who converted one of two with 50 seconds

Smart missed again but Thomas was fouled by Irvin. He made both shots with 40 seconds left and Indiana trailed. 76-75.

Irvin was fouled by Calloway with 26 seconds to go. LSU's third-best foul shooter, at 79.7 percent, Irvin missed on the first shot and mas got the rebound.

Indiana raced downcourt without calling a time-out and set up the final winning sequence . with Thomas and Calloway.

"I'm not a believer in setting up plays," Knight said when asked why he hadn't called for time. "I have enough confidence in them knowing what we want done and what our strengths are."

Louisiana State (24-15) was the only team from last year's field of eight to reach that stage this year. Sunday's loss, said Coach Dale Brown, was "a javelin through my stomach and (NYT, AP) hack."

ART BUCHWALD Marriage à la Click

WASHINGTON - The big question is who holds the power in the average American home. Up until recently the answer was up for grabs. Now this has changed. Dr. Jungfreud, a visiting psychiatrist at Paneful University, told me, "The power in the United Status States rests with the person who controls the TV remote unit." "Zapl" I said.

Studies show the man or woman who has the ability 10 change a TV channel from bed is the one who will get the respect in the family " the family." But all one is doing is selectiog programs. That doesn't make you a set. The person who has his finger on the clicker is making a powerful statement. He is saying in no uncertain terms, 'You mess with me and you'll never see Channel 9 again." "

I said, "I personally don't care who holds the remote in our family. There are many nights when I've let my wife click it as long as she wants to. We've had no power prohlem, except on the occasional evening when I have asked her in a very nice way to give the remote back in me and she refused. I got really mad because she knew it was my mm." "And what did you do when she

Leningrad Premieres

Play by Kurt Vonnegut

Agence France-Presse MOSCOW — A Kurt Vonnegut play was premiered in Leningrad over the weekend, the latest in a series of American plays to be staged in the Soviet Union, the Tass news agency said.

"Happy Birthday, Wanda Jane" was directed by Valeri Grishko at the Vera Kommisarzhevskaya Theater, named after a Russian tragic actress. Georgi Tovstonogov, director of the Leningrad theatrical institute, was quoted as saying that American drama "gives rich food "No one ever told you mixing refor thought about the present-day mote TV with marriage would be world."

refused to give back the remote?" Dr. Jungfreud asked. "I inld her she wasn't being fair, and that no marriage can survive if one spouse switches channels more than the other."

"Did your wife keep the remote?" "She did for 'I'll Take Manhattan,' but I took it back when she dozed off during 'People's Court.' " "Can you tell me how often you've let her use the TV clicker?" "More than a lot of husbands I know Yet you feel that when she holds the remote she has the upper hand?

"Not all the time. But I think I should be consulted when she uses the 'mute' hutton during Dan Rather. She also changes programs without asking me. I'm for women's rights, hut how many women in this country do you know who are up to operating a remote buiton on a 19-inch Sony?

"On the other hand, they have come a long way since the fine tuner was invented," Dr. Jungfrend said. "Frankly I think you are in a power struggle with your wife. Ev-ery time she grabs the clicker and goes by the 'A-Team' you feel emasculated."

"Maybe you're right, but what do I do?

"You both have in gain equal control of the channels. This can be done either with a remote TV marital agreement, specifyiog how much time a person will have in hold the clicker, or, if that doesn't work, by purchasing a second reday. mote so each ol you will have your own in bed." "I like the second idea better than the first. This will give me a chance to zap her 'Wheel of Fortune' off the screen."

"And she can do the same in your wrestling. It will become a game, and there is oothing like a game in keep two people happy in the bedroom."

"Are couples all over America experiencing the same problem?" 'I am afraid they are. Most people don't even know they're at war when they're watching TV." The whole thing seems sick."

Dianne Wiest: Success in Neurosis

By Leslie Bennetts

New York Times Service N EW YORK — She was heard before she was even seen, but although the words are those of Lady Macbeth, the accent was a fractured Polish that immedi-ately sent a wave of laughter rippling through the audience. When Anka did ap-TEW YORK - She was heard before pear, backing onstage in sweatsocks and a voluminous nightgown, she was holding her hands out and moaning, "Out, damned spot!" Her husband was huddled in bed with a pillow over his head, trying in vain to sleep, but that didn't stop Anka; when she finished Lady Macbeth's soliloquy, she launched into the story of her own life. Sly, funny and thoroughly subversive, Anka is a hilarious character, and Dianne Wiest made triumphant work of her in "Hunting Cockroaches," which just finished its run at the Manhattan Theater Club. Critical accolades are nothing new for Wiest, who is having something of a banner year. However, Anka — an unem-ployed emigre actress living in a Lower East Side tenement with her husband, whose insomnia is exacerbated by Anka's delight in hiding his sleeping pills — repre-sented something of a departure for Wiest. Although Anka describes herself as "a nervous wreck," in fact she is irrepressibly cheerful, maintaining a constant stream of high-spirited chatter even at 4 o'clock in the morning and telling jokes in herself when she can't get her husband 10 listen.

Unlike Anka, many of Wiest's other characters have indeed been oervous wrecks whose humor was entirely inadvertent. Although her stage credits range from Desdemona to Hedda Gahler, Wiest has become best known for a series of anxious, insecure women who seem to be taxed to the breaking point just getting through the Notable among these are her last two performances in Woody Allen movies. Wiest has already received the New York

Film Critics Award and has been cominated lor an Academy Award as best support-ing actress for "Hannah and Her Sisters." She plays Holly, the chronically depressed would-be actress who flunks all her anditions, starts a husiness called Stanislavsky Catering to try 10 achieve greater success with hors d'ocuvres, and then is wracked by doubt about whether she should become a writer instead. And in Allen's latest movie. "Radio

Days," Wiest created a poignant portrait of the perpetually single aunt so desperate to land a husband that her hopes overwhelm her with every hopeless date, be he homosexual, already married or merely an unredeemable rat

But to all her characters, whatever their circumstances, Wiest brings a sense of psy-chic fragility that is riveling. Some of her characters are in genuinely despetate straits; in her last New York stage appear-ance, in Arthur Miller's "After the Fall," Wiest gave a shattering performance as Maggie, the famous writer's movie-star wife who is undone by alcohol, drugs and her own spiral into madness. Other charac-York neurotics on paper, but in Wiest's hands their vulnerability becomes heartrendingly memorable.

Asked whether such parts reflect her real nature, Wiest grinned. "I know Woody thinks I'm a nut," she acknowledged. Why does he think she's a nut? There was a long pause. "He's prohably got his reasons," she said. Well, is she a nut? Another long pause. "I view myself as a sort of normal lady," she ventured, a pronouncement that promptly sent her into gales of laughter. "But of course I'm familiar with deep anxi-ety," she added. "I'm familiar with neurosis. That's certainly in me, but I would hope that wouldn't be what you would think upon meeting me." More laughter.

Indeed, Wiest seems quite sensible and competent. Then again, she learned early on to create an image for public consump-tion. As the child of a psychiatric social worker in the U.S. Army, Wiest lived in so many different places she has trouble re-she had just come in from the rain with her lashes still wet -- and wrinkling ber snuh oose, she tried to list them: "Kansas City, Missouri; Nuremberg, Germany; San Antonio, Denver, Staten Island, Washington, D.C., West Point. Is that all? I think so."

Wiest, whose father and mother met in Algiers and married in Naples, soon learned to adjust to the insecurity of constant change. "It's rough on a kid, having to pull up and leave Iriends you've made," she said. "It's very painful. There are benefits: You see the world, you develop some sophistication, and when you go to new places you're forced to go through this period of adjustment, which I guess has served me well. But it wasn't like having a hometown and friends yon've known all your life."

Nevertheless, Wiest soon opted for an equally insecure life on her own. Although her earliest passion was ballet, getting cast as Cornelia Otis Skinner in a school production of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" altered her course forever. "I got a couple of laughs, and that was that," she

Wiest remembers all too well the years

she suffered through six months of unemployment at a stretch. "There have been long dry periods. I used to say I acted because I couldn't do anything else, which is true. And I've thought about my lack of education, and thought, my god, maybe I could have been a lawyer - that's a much better life. I have gone through periods of regret about it. But I guess I'm doing exactwhat I want to do. This is the first play I've done in two years, and it's like somebody put a fish back in water. I just love it; I don't know why. I just can't get enough of

However, until Wiest became part of Woody Allen's inner circle, the future seemed a scary prospect. "It was rough, financially hard, and just not knowing whether I'd ever have a peaceful livelihood, because you can't make any money in theater. But with Woody, that has eased up. Although oobody else is sending me scripts. I don't feel as if he's going to cast me to the wolves. It's not just a hlank slate ahead of me, and that really is because of him. Before that, I was really getting anx-ious for a more secure situation; I was thinking I'd better get out and try to teach or something."

Her association with Allen, which began with a small role in "The Purple Rose of Cairo," has grown into a bulwark of her existence. "It's like a family now. It's like going back to achool every year, come the fall. The same crew is there, the same cinematographer, the same cameraman, Mia of course, and Woody."

"Hannah and Her Sisters." "It's nice," she added fervently, her gratitude evoking a starving kitten who has just been taken into a loving home and fed a bowl of cream. Personally as well as professionally, the past year has marked a major turning point for Wiest. "I just bought my first home, a co-op on the Upper West Side. I have lived in furnished sublets all my life, which is terribly immature of me, I gness."

However, its size is clearly unsuited to accommodating Wiest's long-term fantasy, so once again her thoughts are gravitating insidiously toward moving. "I want a home that my grandchildren can come to," she said dreamily, "a big four-bedroom apart-ment with a dining room and an eat-in bitchen — a place I'll never have to move from, no matter how big my family should grow to be - that will be like Grandma's nlace."

First, however, it is necessary to find a mate. A three-year romance with Sam. Cohn, her agent, has come to an end, although he will continue to manage her career. "He's one of my closest friends in the world --- one of the dearest men I'll ever know," Wiest said softly.

Now, however, it is back to "the search." as she puts it. Fearful of typecasting, she will oot reveal her age, but the biological clock is ticking very loudly. "I can't imag-ine my life without children. I've never been married or had a child, but I want that very badly," Wistful and eager as one of . her own on-screen creations, she added hopefully, "Do you know anybody?"
